

DFDL Mekong beefs up Bangkok office; hires from Herbert Smith, KPMG

REUTERS/Sukree Sukplang

DFDL Mekong added three legal advisers to its Bangkok office after luring Siriluck Wilaiwong from KPMG, and hiring for its corporate & commercial team lawyers Veeravi Benjayati and Chai Lertvittayachaikul, who have previously worked in firms like Herbert Smith and Watson, Farley & Williams.

Benjayati, who will join as senior legal adviser, represents multinational clients in share acquisition deals, advises on the incorporation of joint venture companies, and other corporate legal issues.

Lertvittayachaikul, as legal adviser, is expected to utilize his expertise in acquisitions and joint ventures involving European companies, aside from advising clients on acquisitions, corporate governance and compliance.

Benjayati and Lertvittayachaikul both have experience advising on general commercial issues and representing clients both as sellers and purchasers in a number of legal due diligence exercises.

Siriluck, as senior legal adviser, will cover a wide range of areas, including general corporate and commercial matters, labour law and employment issues, land law and corporate matters such as mergers and acquisitions, including winding-up and insolvency matters.

Siriluck has more than twenty years of experience providing legal and tax advice to clients, the last nine years of which were spent at KPMG Phoomchai Tax Ltd. ALB